Boone County Interact

FLORENCE – Sixteen youths from Northern Kentucky spent a week in the Dominican Republic in June in volunteer work with the Interact Club of Boone County.

The youths, ranging in age from 11 to 18, spent most of their time painting a church, a school and local homes in Santo Domingo. They also volunteered in a pre-school ministry and visited children in an orphanage.

“They went out of their comfortable homes and their comfort zones to make a difference for other people,” said Barbara Rahn, the adviser to the club. “They went into a different country and a different culture and had an incredible experience.”

The Interact Club is sponsored by the Florence Rotary Club. The students who made the trip debuted a documentary on their experiences created by two Conner High School students, Braden Siebert and Alex King, at the Florence Rotary meeting on Monday, July 20.

Rahn later presented Siebert with a Leadership Award for creating a field day for children in Santo Domingo. She presented a Helping Hand award to
